OPPENHEIMER CONCLUDES ITS TWELFTH INDUSTRIAL GROWTH CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK

New York, May 11, 2017 – Oppenheimer & Co. Inc. (“Oppenheimer”), a unit of Oppenheimer Holdings (NYSE: OPY), held its annual Industrial Growth Conference in New York City on May 9 and 10, 2017.

For the twelfth year in a row, this conference brought together leading public companies in the industrial sector. This year’s event featured more than 50 companies – including General Electric; Ecolab; FedEx; and Graco – providing investors with strategic insights on market trends and opportunities in the space. Oppenheimer hosted company presentations, group sessions and one-on-one meeting opportunities for the institutional investors in attendance.

Oppenheimer Senior Research Analyst attendees, who offered guidance on many aspects of the industrials sector, included:

- Jim Giannakouros, Senior Analyst for Industrial Machinery & Flow Control
- Christopher Glynn, Senior Analyst for Industrial Multi-Industry
- Noah Kaye, Senior Analyst for Sustainable Growth & Resource Optimization
- Colin Rusch, Senior Analyst for Sustainable Growth & Resource Optimization
- Scott A. Schneeberger, Senior Analyst for Industrial & Business Services
- Ian Zaffino, Managing Director, Senior Analyst for Special Situations

“Shifting trends at play in the geopolitical landscape make this an interesting time for the industrial sector, which is an important vertical for Oppenheimer,” said Erica L. Moffett, Managing Director and Associate Director of Research. “With the new administration and the proposed infrastructure spending yet to be determined, this year’s conference is especially important for investors to understand the current landscape for the industrial companies.”

Oppenheimer’s next conference is the Firm’s Emerging Growth Conference, which will be held on May 16 in New York. Other upcoming conferences include the 17th Annual Consumer Conference and the 20th Annual Conference on Technology, Internet and Communications, which will be held on June 20-21 and August 8-9, respectively. These meetings provide additional opportunities for investors to meet a cross section of management teams across a number of different business models.
